

Dear Parents & Carers,

As you receive this edition of The Link, our fantastic pupils and staff are enjoying the satisfaction of completing the whole school sponsored walk! I believe that last time we were able to hold this event was back in 2019, so it has been a lovely afternoon for our school community. Thank you for any sponsorship you are providing to raise important funds for our school and to support a charitable donation. In particular, thank you to Mr Wise, Head of Performing Arts for his leadership and coordination of the event.

Next week is the last week of this half term. It has been extremely busy with ongoing lessons and learning complimented by a wide range of enrichment events for pupils. Indeed, only yesterday our pupils enjoyed a visit from external Science Technology, Engineering & Maths colleagues to talk about possible careers in such sectors.

For year 11, key 'how to revise' sessions are being offered next week from a wide range of colleagues in the school, with lots of useful advice to support their approach to effective revision. Please look out for the specific information from Dr Wood, Deputy Headteacher about this. With the mock exams not far away, year 11 pupils should certainly be engaging with regular and purposeful revision.

With best wishes for a good weekend

John Parr
Headteacher

Maths Exam Skills Support

Thank you to everyone who attended my free lesson on Exam Tips and Hints for GCSE on Monday evening. # Revision Techniques

Finding the right revision technique takes some practice. To help decide what the best method is for individual students we have put together a menu of short revision technique sessions at lunchtime next week and for two weeks after half term. You can see the timetable below. Some techniques work best for all subjects, and some lend themselves more to certain subjects, but there is one thing that is true for all subjects: you will have to recall and write down what you know. Your revision should therefore consist of trying to write down what you know from memory.

If you had your driving test next week you would want to practise driving as much as possible rather than reading about it, wouldn't you? Watching someone else drive or finding reasons to do anything other than driving until the night before wouldn't help either, you would likely get the keys and start looking for the car only to find it had no fuel in it. Too late, it is now down to chance.

Please help your child to revise by providing a space that is warm and quiet to work in. Ask them what they are doing and when. Encourage them to be active in their revision, reward them for revising. Revising a little and often is scientifically proven to be the best approach. For this reason, we will be talking to them about how to plan their revision in PSHE lessons before half-term as well as showing them how to revise. Unfortunately, we can't do the revision for them.

There is more information on the school website (in the 'Students/Revision' section) about revising and dealing with exam stress and blank revision timetables amongst other things. We will publish the exam timetable and the topic lists in this location too as well as sending them electronically to each student.
